

Australian Risk Policy Institute – New Delhi Institute of Management

The Australian Risk Policy Institute (ARPI) and New Delhi Institute of Management (NDIM) are very pleased to announce a formal collaboration to deliver ARPI's Strategic Risk Policy® educational programmes across Asia.

ARPI, a not-for-profit institute, promotes new leadership thinking and approaches to help organisations adapt to ensure informed and pre-emptive decision-making, recognising today's transformative and disruptive world. ARPI has established a Global Risk Policy Network across government, industry, academic and community sectors, promoting necessary paradigm change to a network-centric model, embracing areas such as critical infrastructure, complex project management, supply-chain resilience and sovereign sustainability.

New Delhi Institute of Management. Set up in 1992, it has been declared "Best Management Institute of India" for 'Industry Linkages', third year in a row by the AICTE (Govt. of India) and the CII (Confederation of Indian Industry) after their nationwide yearlong surveys of all the 10000+ technical and higher education AICTE approved institutions across India under 19 parameters. NDIM has been declared Best also by the ASSOCHAM in 2017, 2018, 2019, 2020, and 2021 for placements and for being best in North India), and is known for finest placements.

NDIM was Declared best also by the FICCI for "Excellence in Employability through Industry Engagement" on 25th February 2021 and "Having been declared Best in India continuously for 3 years; NDIM has been elevated and declared as the First and the only "Mentor Institute" of India in the Management category by the AICTE".

"World is getting integrated more and more, not just economically but in many other ways, as the pandemic has shown. Education builds bridges to create new necessary partnerships to deliver on demands of the changing world. NDIM has taken this strategic step to realise the potential."

-Mr. Suresh Prabhu

Member of Parliament (Rajya Sabha)

India's G20 and G7 Sherpa

"We have been looking to supplement our HR policies & processes with Global Risk Policies & Research. Learning in the field of Risk has assumed priority and urgency in all our planning with the ongoing pandemic. Partnering with Australian Risk Policy Institute is a highly welcome news for India's professionals. And I welcome this beginning with tremendous hope & pride."

-Mr. Dhananjay Singh

Director General

The National HRD Network (NHRDN)

"It is a great honour and privilege to enter a partnership with the New Delhi Institute of Management to share ARPI's educational initiatives. Strategic Risk Policy® promotes leadership paradigm change for pre-emptive and enhanced decision-making. We all learn every day of our lives and it is indeed critical today to anticipate, be situationally aware including of sudden change and to be resilient."
